

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS - INAUGURAL 2010 EDITION

TELLING THE WORLD IS ONE WAY TO COMPLETE YOUR JOURNEY

River of Life: Journal of International Volunteers invites you to share your volunteer experiences by using the voice that best suits your story:

at WORK: Manuscripts focusing on the work of local NGOs and/or in the first-person tense that resemble journalistic writing in ACTION: Action research submissions, focusing on situational analysis and directed change

by HEART: Style of writing focusing on personal transformations through development work, much like journaling or essays

RIVER OF LIFE HAS AN OPEN SUBMISSION POLICY

About the journal

River of Life is a peer-reviewed electronic journal dedicated to development through volunteer work. International volunteers embrace the opportunity to contribute and choose a role in the "flow" – purposely traveling uncharted waters, often unsure of depth or current. As such, volunteering is an exploration of sustainability through action, with the intent and hope to facilitate positive change.

About the logo

The River of Life logo is in the oldest known writing called "cuneiform." The Journal's philosophy flows from this ancient publication strategy focusing on cross-cultural change, development and, most importantly, people.

TOGETHER WE CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE
